The Meeting To-Night.

The three distinguished gentlemen ho speak for us to-night, are expected on the noon trains at Bridge port. The speaking will commence at half past six in the evening. It is im-portant that our Union people assemble as early as possible. Three speeches can not be made within a seasonable time unless the meeting is organized as early as possible. We hope, therefore, that every necessary arrangement will be perfected for a prompt commencement at the hour named.

The evening promises to be too in-clement for out-door speaking, and the meeting will, therefore, be organized in-side the Court House. We regret that we have not a building capable of hold-ing at least half the people who will want to hear the able and eloquent men o are to address us. Due attention should be given to suitably preparing the Court House for accommodating as ourt House for accommodating as ay as possible. Every inch of space uld be made a vallable. Ve want our oppose.

It We want our opponents to come out and hear the facts and arguments upon which the Union cause rests at this stage of our national affairs. Every intelligent, candid mind desires to unerstand exactly the views to which it stands opposed. How can any man be rationally assured of his own position rationally assured of his own position so long as he misunderstands its opposite. Truth is truth only after emerging from the crucible—not till then. "Audi alteram partem" was adjudged by Cicero to be the noblest maxim of

We say then to our opponents, come out this evening and hear Gen. Cox, one of the noblest men developed by the war, and the governor elect of the reat State just opposite us. You are urely not afraid to hear him tell you the easons for the faith that is in him. Not him and his two eloquent colleagues, you will have before you, in all proba-bility, a full exposition of the best that can be said on our side of the question.

The Waste of War Less than is supposed—Observations in Virginia and North Carolina—General State of Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14, 1855.

A recent tour through Virginia, and North Carolina as far as Raleigh, has satisfied me that the waste of war has not been by any means so great as is generally imagined, and that it is far from being irreparable. The traveler who sees for the first time the perforated roofs and walls of Fredericksburg, the burnt district in Richmond, or the wide wastes made in the vicinity of Orango and Alexandria Raligona, is apt to conclude that the State is utterly ruined, and that to line of the Orango and Alexandria Raligona, is apt to conclude that the State is utterly ruined, and that nothing can reclaim it short of a wholesale Northern immigration, with millions of capital. This was my own first impression; but on returning I took quile a different view of things. The scenes of desolation seemed dwarfed. They no longer spread before me as interminable wastes. I began to reflect that they Suamus is and wastes for all this clamor. Why simply this: the Legisedamor? Why simply this: the Legisthe burnt district in Richmond, or the wide wastes made in the vicinity of Petersburg, and on the line of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, is apt to conclude that the Stafe is utterly ruined, and that nothing can reclaim it short of a wholesale Northern immigration, with millions of capital. This was my own first impression; but on returning I took quite a different view of things. The scenes of desclution seemed dwarfed. They no longer spread before me as interminable wastes. I began to redect that they were merely the battle-fields and encampments, and that in comparison in with the territory of the great Sate of Virginia, they were more than spots on the sun's disk. All over the State, doubtless, the people were stripped by "Confederate" tax gathers and military purveyors, or by Union foragers, of their horses, cattle and poultry, their corn and bacon but for the most part the houses and fences were left unbouched, except where hostile armies met, or where encampments were made.

I was pleased to observe that even on the lines of railroad, the destruction of houses and fences was confined, for the most part, to the vicinity of the towns he lines of railroad, the destruction of houses and fences was confined, for the most part, to the vicinity of the towns which have been the scenes of long sieges and great battles; while the intervening country appears to have been almost unharmed, except that south of Petersburgh, for forty miles, the depots were destroyed, as well as some of those between Fredericksburg, and Richmond.

Along much the greater portion of these long-contested highways it is difficult to recognize the hand of war, except in the neglected farms. On the line of the Virginia Contral one can scarcely trace any vestige of the terrific and protracted struggle, in the whole distance of clothy miles between Richmond and Gordonsville. The house and fences remain rainjured, and the or Cicero to be the noblest maxim of the Romans. Its simple meaning is the grant the general effect upon the eye of a traveler in the area is that with word have been deep to the war. Not not you have any interest in being in the wrong. Come and measure your need with his. When you have heard time and his two eloquent colleagues, on will have before you, in all probability, a full exposition of the best that the religious protection is the religious tracks of the contending hosts would be scarcely visible.

the verge of the near horizon; and doubtless at the distance of two or three miles from the railroad the track of the most poblity, a full exposition of the best that can be said on our side of the question. Come, therefore, and hear with unprejudiced minds, and then afterwards judge whether you are right or wrong.

Our Union friends we need not exhort to come out. We are only afraid that large crowds of them will be unable to get within sight or sound of the speakers. Our great regret is that an occasion so unusual can not be improved to the advantage of every voter in the city. We would that every citizen, friends and foes, could have an opportunity to quietly and calmyl listen to and reflect upon the speeckes this evening. Every Union man in the city felt himself the better of Gov. Wright's great speech at the Court House this month one year ago. And every such one will, we confidently trust, feel himself likewise benefitted this evening.

The Trisdelphia Meeting.

The Union men in Triadelphia township are working nobly. We have no doubt that they will have a meeting of the right sort on Saturday afternoon next. If the wealher is at all favorable we expect to see a large gathering of active, live men. As another meeting will not be held in Liberty township, we hope for a good sized attendance from that region. Our friends up in the Valley Grove district should come down in force. Keep the ball rolling and we shall schieve a glorious victory this day week. As we read the indications the enemy are anything but sanguine. We believe their hopes are decidedly on the wans. Pashon the column. Everything looks well along the line.

Marshall County.

A friend in Marshall fears that the Union men are relying too much on their former big majorities, and that the Union men are relying too much on their former big majorities, and that any present of the surrender, so that this proposal in the former of the State never experience of the former of the surrender, so that this proposal proposal the province of the first tran
